Strengthening youth and family justice systems around the world: Concrete and promising practices concerning child protection, youth crime prevention, diversion and alternatives programmes to detention, aftercare and reintegration.

Twenty-six simultaneous workshops will present strategies or experience to strengthen juvenile and family justice systems, always taking into account child participation. The following twelve topics will be addressed by speakers from the perspective of legal reform, scientific research, or validated practice. Presentations will bring best-practices, meta-analyses and research from evidence-based policies and practice. More than 300 proposals have been submitted to the scientific committee. The selection is set out in the program below with the language(s) of each workshop.

Themes

- Improving protection systems for children. How can their voice be heard?
- Juvenile Crime Prevention: Making children actors of their own changes.
- Diversion and Alternatives programmes: better understanding of children's needs and development.
- How to reduce the number of children in pre-trial and other kind of detention?
- Aftercare and reintegration: Children and their community, engaging with the dialogue.
- Engaging multi-agency actions between child protection, justice, education and health eg children who appear in both Youth and Family Court jurisdictions.
- Gender responsive approach for girls in the justice system.
- Strategies to ensure that children accused or suspected of committing violent extremism are treated as children and afforded due process.
- Situation of "returnees " children: current trends and specific programmes.
- Preventing children from violent extremism and promising experiences in the process of disengagement.
- A fair justice for children in every context: hybridity of formal and informal justice.
- Advocating children's rights: strategies to abolish inhuman sentencing: death penalty, life sentences.
